Malta, Romania, Poland and France EVO expertise sharing

The ShareExPlus project is funded by the EU under the Internal Security Fund Police - operational cooperation in the fight against firearms trafficking (2014 – 2020) with a total expenditure of €1,378,278. The project aims at enhancing the operational capacity of the Malta Police Force (MPF), the General Inspectorate of Romanian Police (IGPR), The Central Forensic Laboratory of the Police in Poland (CFLP) and the Polish Regional Police in Lublin (PRP) who will be procuring the EVO finder and other equipment related to forensic ballistics examination. The French National Police (FNP) will be providing support during the implementation of the project and play an advisory role to fulfil the main objectives of the project, namely the exchange of information between European member states. The Police officers from the participating partners will be attending two training courses in Germany and France and a final workshop in Malta in order to enhance their skills in the fight against gun crime and illegal firearms trafficking. By the end of the project Malta, Romania and Poland will be connected to the EVO finder network which will enhance their capability to easily and efficiently share data related to firearms between the participating partners within the EVO finder network. Ultimately, Europol will have an advisory role during the project implementation.

This project has received funding from the European Union's Internal Security Fund Police - Operational cooperation in the fight against firearms trafficking (2014-2020) under grant agreement No. 101035949
